

Winter is Coming: Stay Outdoors

When autumn arrives, many people have the natural reaction to seek refuge within their homes. I think it's a natural process most northern dwellers live. We're programmed to lock down and hibernate.

Winter doesn't have to be all about staying by the fireplace and drinking some eggnog. Sure, it's enjoyable to stay indoors and watch a movie under a pile of blankets, but variety is key in everything in life and here's an idea to make winter time a unique and fun experience for you and your family.

Outdoor fireplaces are a great way to bring the indoors outside. Why not have a marshmallow roast in the backyard during a light sprinkling of snow? You can turn your backyard into a ski resort with the right accessories. These fireplaces are inexpensive and safe. Place a few logs around the fire and you have the makings for a great evening with friends and family in an atmosphere most wouldn't expect from an urban setting.
